TEXTO 1

Men and Depression

STOP PRETENDING

NOTHING IS WRONG

Men are less likely to admit they're depressed than women, and may turn to alcohol, drugs and violent behavior instead of seeking treatment. By the numbers have a look at who's affected.

Depression Ratio 2:1 Women are twice as likely as men to report depression.	Suffering Now 6 mil Depression affects more than 6 million men in any one year.
During a Lifetime 9% Some 9% of men report depression at some point.	During 2000 2% Men received psychotherapy during 2% of all visits to the doctor.

As one might expect, depression can present itself as feeling sad or "having the blues". However, sadness may not always be the dominant feeling of a depressed person. Depression can also be experienced as a numb or empty feeling, or perhaps no awareness of feeling at all. A depressed person may experience a noticeable loss in their ability to feel pleasure about anything. Depression, as viewed by psychiatrists, is an illness in which a person experiences a marked change in their mood and in the way they view themselves and the world.

For men it's very hard not only to admit or even recognize their own depression but mainly how to get help.

TEXTO 2

YOUR RECENT PACKAGES ABOUT SEVERE acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) were both excellent ("The Mystery of SARS," May 5, and "Waiting for Disaster," May 12). I believe it's especially important to recognize the dangers of living with animals. Many diseases affecting humans come from them. It's also time to evaluate our foods and their sources.

SILVIO SANDRO CORNELIO
RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL

WHILE IT IS TRUE THAT EMERGENT infections (primarily HIV) have increased mortality rates in the developed world over the past three decades, we should remember that preventable and/or treatable infectious diseases like tuberculosis still kill millions of people every year. This primarily due to slower delivery of vaccination programs and antibiotic therapy in many parts of the developing world. Progress may make us sick, but lack of progress is likely to kill us.

FLASHES FROM THE ZERO HUNGER PROGRAM

- The day he was elected president of Brazil, Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva announced that his administration's top priority would be to guarantee that every Brazilian could eat three meals a day.
- As president Lula said, "Emergency donations are necessary, but everybody knows that they will not put an end to the problem. It is necessary to give someone fish and then teach him how to fish."
- We need to defeat hunger, poverty and social exclusion, said Lula. "Our war is not going to kill anyone but save lives."
- To get the program going, a series of initiatives can and need to be taken, such as enrollment of the people who will benefit, implementation of food banks, literacy and professional training, cooperatives, family farms, basic sanitation, etc.
- The main arguments showed against Zero Hunger are its demagogic character, its inconsistent scientific basis and its lack of clear goals to solve problems.
